

SPEED SHARING COMPETITION

BEATING THE SLUMP

EVENT DESCRIPTION

Beating the Slump is a fast-paced, interactive sharing session designed for NTU graduate students who are navigating the pressure, isolation, and burnout of postgraduate life. In this session, participants will give short 2–3 minute mini-presentations to share what has helped them survive, and sometimes even thrive, during academic slumps. These can include:

- A study hack or writing routine that actually works
- Productivity rituals (e.g. café writing, Pomodoro, music, late-night bursts)
- A slump survival story (funny, messy, or inspiring)
- One piece of advice you wish someone had told you earlier

The event concludes with a group discussion where participants reflect on what strategies resonate, what doesn't, and what they might try next. To keep things lively and fun, participants can vote for the "Most Creative Coping Mechanism" award. This session is designed to be supportive, practical, and light-hearted, offering graduate students a space to learn from one another's real experiences.
